Loose Leaf Tea vs. Tea Bags

High quality loose teas are made from the Camellia sinensis plant. The finest hand-picked buds, whole tea leaves, large pieces of leaves or a combination of these parts make up the tea. The time of year and growing conditions greatly affect the quality of tea.

In contrast, the tea found in tea bags usually consist of smaller pieces of tea leaves or tea fannings (also referred to as dusts) which may give a quicker brew, but lack the subtlety and full flavor of the larger loose leaf teas. Tea bags can also release more tannins than loose teas giving a harsher flavor to the tea.

Now you know why Kowee Tea tastes so delicious.
